DETAILED ACTION

Information Disclosure Statement

The "reference" lined-through on the IDS is simply a raw search report, that is, an opinion. It is not a primary reference document per se.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over applicant's own admission in view of case law.

Applicant claims a process for producing xylylenediamine and/or cyanobenzene by catalytic reduction in a liquid phase of a phthalonitrile where the concentration of a benzamide is maintained below 0.35% (claim 1). The dependent claims further refine the process.

Applicant explicitly admits in the specification (page 1, line 14) that: "It is well known in the art to produce the xylylenediamine by hydrogenating the phthalonitrile in a liquid phase in the presence of a catalyst."

Applicant distinguishes over the prior art only in that a less contaminated starting material is employed. This yields a more satisfactory process (higher yields, longer catalyst life; specification page 3, line 8). However, the use of a more purified starting material in the interest of improving the reaction (any reaction) would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention.

In order for an invention to be obvious, two things must be found in the prior art: 1) the suggestion of the invention, and 2) the expectation of its success. In re Vaeck, 947 F.2d 488, 492, 20 USPQ2d 1438, 1441 (Fed. Cir. 1991). In the instant case, both 1) and 2) above are found in the general teachings of the chemical arts. That is, that a reaction which employs purified starting material is likely to be superior (in a whole host of parameters: purity of products, limitation of side reactions, avoidance of catalyst poisoning, etc.) to a reaction run with impure starting materials. The selection of a starting material having a particular set of impurity concentrations for use in the prior art reaction is merely an instance of optimization of a known prior art reaction.
